Preface

Comprehensive data about the provision of Languages education in Victorian government schools has been collected centrally and published since 1991. This report provides an analysis of the provision of Languages education in Victorian government schools in 2014, including the government's Victorian School of Languages (VSL) and data about the provision of Languages education in accredited Community Languages Schools (CLS) funded by DET in 2014. The report does not include data about the provision of languages education in non-government schools.

The Victorian Government Vision for Languages Education is the previous Government's Languages policy, which articulated a commitment that all government school students from Prep to Year 10 would be learning a language by 2025, starting with Prep in 2015. Initiatives to support schools achieve the target were elaborated in the Languages - expanding your world: Plan to implement The Victorian Government's Vision for Languages Education 2013-2025.

In 2014, twenty-two languages were taught in mainstream government schools, with Italian, Japanese, Indonesian, Chinese (Mandarin), French, German, Auslan and Spanish the most-studied languages across all government primary and secondary schools in Victoria. 1,110 (77.1 percent) of government schools in Victoria offered Languages programs in 2014, with a total of 317,175 students (57.5 percent) enrolled in these programs. A further 4,115 students were enrolled in taster programs at the secondary level. A taster program exposes students to a range of languages for a short period before they select one language for ongoing study.

Forty-nine languages were taught to a total of 15,681 students through the Victorian School of Languages (VSL) in out-of-school hours, including via distance education. The eight most-studied languages at the VSL were Chinese (Mandarin), Vietnamese, Greek, Japanese, Arabic, French, Sinhala and Punjabi. Therefore, there was a total of 336,971 enrolments in language programs in 2014 in government primary and secondary schools and through the VSL.

In addition, 40 languages were taught through Community Languages Schools (CLS). CLS provide classes to students from Prep to Year 12 (depending on the language) outside mainstream school hours; i.e. after school or on weekends. In total, 37,052 students studied Languages at an accredited CLS. The eight most-studied languages in CLS were Chinese (Mandarin), Greek, Vietnamese, Arabic, Sinhala, Somali, Tamil and Italian. These students may also have studied a language at a government or non-government mainstream school.

In total, in 2014, students in Victoria studied 66 languages through government schools, the VSL and CLS. Appendix 1 contains a list of the 66 languages by education provider.

1. Overview of the Study of Languages in 2014

The following analysis reviews Languages study overall and at the primary and secondary levels in Victorian government schools over the last seven years. It provides an overview of the current state of Languages and highlights the differing patterns in the study of Languages at the primary and secondary levels.

Victorian Government Primary and Secondary Schools

This report considers data collected in August 2014, from 1,440 government primary and secondary schools in Victoria. Across the 1,440 schools, 1,202 schools offered primary-level schooling and 314 schools offered secondary-level schooling. English language schools and special schools are not included in this figure, nor are they considered in this report.

It should be noted that the number of government schools changes slightly each year. For example, data from 1,454 schools was considered in the 2012 report, while this number decreased to 1,443 in 2013 and to 1,440 schools in 2014. Therefore, percentages, as well as actual numbers, are provided for clarity in some tables and figures (e.g. Figure 1.2).

Languages Programs in Victorian Government Schools

In 2014, 1,110 (77.1 percent) of 1,440 government schools in Victoria offered Languages programs. A total of 317,175 students (57.5 percent) were enrolled in these programs. A further 4,115 students were enrolled in taster programs at the secondary level. There were also 15,681 enrolments at the Victorian School of Languages (VSL), bringing the total number of enrolments in Languages programs in 2014 to 336,971 (Table 1.1).

Twenty-two languages were taught in mainstream government schools in 2014, while 49 languages were studied through the VSL. Table 1.1 provides a summary of enrolments in Victorian government primary and secondary schools, as well as all enrolments at the VSL (including through distance education), for 2014. Note that at the secondary level, students studying more than one language through taster programs are counted for each language in which they are enrolled. Hence, Table 1.1 represents student enrolments, not the number of students studying a language.

*As a percentage of Languages enrolments.

Figure 1.1 details trends in the six most-studied languages between 2008 and 2014. This figure includes enrolments at the primary and secondary levels, as well as all enrolments at the VSL (including distance education enrolments). In 2014, there was a continued increase in the number of schools providing languages programs and a consequential increase in the number of students learning languages. While increases in the uptake of a range of languages can be seen, enrolments in Chinese (Mandarin) in particular, continue to grow rapidly.

The increased uptake in Languages programs by schools is illustrated in Table 1.2, following, which provides an outline of the number of Languages programs in Victorian government primary and secondary schools in 2014. The number of Languages programs provided increased notably for Indonesian, Japanese and Chinese (Mandarin).

Table 1.2: Number of primary and secondary level programs, by language, 2014

*Note that the second column counts the number of schools teaching each language, while the other columns count program numbers. If a P-9 or P-12 school offers a Languages program at both primary and secondary levels, it is counted in both the Primary level programs column and the Secondary level programs column. Hence, the totals in the Number of schools offering language column is sometimes less than the Total number of programs column.

Trends in Languages Programs in Victorian Government Primary Schools (excluding VSL)

While there had been an ongoing decline in the number of government primary schools providing Languages programs between 2008 and 2012, there was a significant increase in the number of primary schools offering a Languages program in 2013, which continued into 2014 (Figure 1.2). An associated increase in student enrolments was achieved as well. The increase in Languages programs was experienced at all year levels but was greatest at the Prep level (up 16.7 percent) (Figure 3.1). The percentage of students studying Languages at the primary level continued to increase from a low of 55.5 percent in 2012 to 68.1 percent in 2014 (Figure 3.3).

The number of primary schools providing each language had declined for most of the larger languages from 2008 to 2012. Chinese (Mandarin) was the only language with an increase in uptake during that period. However, between 2013 and 2014, language program numbers increased noticeably for Indonesian, Japanese and Chinese (Mandarin), with the number of primary schools offering French, German and Italian remaining relatively stable (Figure 1.3).

Trends in Languages Programs in Victorian Government Secondary Schools (excluding VSL)

The percentage of secondary schools offering a Languages program and the number of secondary students studying a language remained relatively stable between 2008 and 2014 (Figure 1.4 and Figure 4.3). The number of schools offering each language also remained relatively consistent, although a further three schools offered Spanish in 2014 (Figure 1.5 and Table 4.1).

Language Profiles

Italian

In 2014, 67,423 students studied Italian in Victorian government schools. It was taught by 387 teachers in 18.8 percent of primary schools and 24.9 percent of secondary schools with Languages programs. Overall, Italian was offered in 229 schools - 160 primary schools, eight primary/secondary schools and 61 secondary schools - as well as through 12 VSL centres, including through distance education. In 2014, 229 students eligible to graduate from secondary school had completed Italian study to Year 12 level (Unit 4). Table 1.3 provides student enrolments in Italian between 2008 and 2014.

Japanese

In 2014, 62,358 students studied Japanese in Victorian government schools. It was taught by 337 teachers in 21 percent of primary schools and 31.4 percent of secondary schools with Languages programs. Overall, Japanese was offered in 263 schools - 174 primary schools, 13 primary/secondary schools and 76 secondary schools - as well as through nine VSL centres, including through distance education. In 2014, 481 students eligible to graduate from secondary school had completed Japanese study to Year 12 level (Unit 4). Table 1.4 provides student enrolments in Japanese between 2008 and 2014.

Indonesian

In 2014, 57,886 students studied Indonesian in Victorian government schools. It was taught by 386 teachers in 22.7 percent of primary schools and 36.1 percent of secondary schools with Languages programs. Overall, Indonesian was offered in 281 schools - 180 primary schools, 28 primary/secondary schools and 73 secondary schools - as well as through three VSL centres, including through distance education. In 2014, 300 students eligible to graduate from secondary school had completed Indonesian study to Year 12 level (Unit 4). Table 1.5 provides student enrolments in Indonesian between 2008 and 2014.

2. Summary of Findings

Victorian Government Primary Schools

Schools

- Eight hundred and eighty-three (883) government primary schools provided a Languages program in 2014, being 73.5 percent of the total of 1,202 primary schools<sup>1</sup>. Not all schools with Languages programs offered the program across all year levels. Languages provision ranged from 65.5 percent of government primary schools at the Prep level, to 67.1 and 66.4 percent at Years 5 and 6, respectively (Figure 3.1 and Table 3.1).
- Indonesian was the most widely-taught language in Victorian government primary schools, with 200 or 22.7 percent of schools providing an Indonesian program, followed by Japanese (185 schools, 21 percent), Chinese (Mandarin) (180 schools, 20.4 percent), Italian (166 schools, 18.8 percent), French (76 schools, 8.6 percent) and German (47 schools, 5.3 percent) (Table 3.2). Appendices 2 and 4 provide details of primary schools and the Languages programs offered in 2014.

Students

- A total of 226,041 primary students studied a language in 2014, representing 68.1 percent of government primary school students. Languages study increased across all year levels, with 65.2 percent of students studying a language at the Prep level, through to 70.6 percent and 69.5 percent of students at Years 5 and 6 respectively (Table 3.3 and Figure 3.4).

Languages taught

- Eighteen languages were offered in government primary schools in 2014, with primary students also studying 48 languages through the VSL. In total, 51 languages were at the primary level.
- The seven most-studied languages in 2014 were Italian (accounting for 21.4 percent of enrolments at the primary level), Japanese (19.9 percent), Indonesian (18 percent), Chinese (Mandarin) (17.7 percent), French (8.5 percent), Auslan (4.4 percent) and German (3.5 percent) (Table 3.4 and Figure 3.5).

Contact time

- The time spent by primary students on language learning varied considerably according to the type of program and the resources available to schools. Contact time ranged from 15 minutes to 300 minutes per week, with an average of 57.1 minutes per week (excluding Bilingual programs in which Languages programs were provided for between 450 and 900 minutes per week). Excluding Bilingual programs, 1.2 percent of Languages programs consisted of at least 150 minutes of teaching per week, which is the minimum time recommended by DET (Figures 3.7 and 3.8).

Regional provision of Languages programs

- In 2014, 10 or more languages were offered in each of the four regions, with Italian the most-studied language in the SWV and NWV regions, Chinese (Mandarin) the most-studied language in the NEV region, while Japanese was the most-studied language in the SEV region (Table 3.6).

Victorian Government Secondary Schools

Schools

- In 2014, 277 or 88.2 percent of the 314 government secondary schools provided Languages programs at one or more year levels (Figure 1.4 and Table 4.1).
- Of the schools providing a Languages program, 43.9 percent provided a continuous language sequence from Year 7 to Year 12. The next highest percentage was for programs from Years 7 to 10, accounting for 15 percent of enrolments in Languages programs (Figure 4.2).

<sup>1</sup> All Victorian government schools with primary and secondary enrolments except special schools and English language schools are included in this survey. Multi-campus schools are regarded as one school. Schools providing both primary and secondary levels are included in both primary and secondary analyses as appropriate.

- Indonesian was the most widely-taught language across Victorian government secondary schools (100 schools or 36.1 percent of schools with Language programs), with Japanese (87 schools, 31.4 percent), French (81 schools, 29.2 percent), Italian (69 schools, 24.9), German (54 schools, 19.5 percent), and Chinese (Mandarin) (51 schools, 18.4 percent), representing the six most-studied languages in 2014 (Table 4.1). Appendices 3 and 5 provide details of secondary schools and the Languages programs offered in 2014.

Students

- A total of 91,134 students studied Languages in Victorian government secondary schools in 2014, representing 41.5 percent of full-time students at Victorian government schools (Table 4.2 and Figure 4.4). A further 4,115 student enrolments were recorded for students studying an additional language (for example, through taster programs), bringing the total number of student enrolments to 95,249 (Table 4.3).
- Among the students who were eligible to graduate from VCE in 2014, 17.6 percent completed a language to the Year 12 level (Unit 4) (Table 4.5).

Languages taught

- Eighteen languages were offered in Victorian government secondary schools in 2014, with secondary students also studying 48 languages through the VSL. In total, 51 languages were studied at the secondary level.
- The six most-studied languages at the secondary level in 2014 were French (accounting for 20 percent of enrolments), Italian (19.4 percent), Indonesian (17.7 percent), Japanese (17.3 percent), German (11.3 percent) and Chinese (Mandarin) (10 percent) (Table 4.3 and Figure 4.5).

Languages study at the VCE level

- Among the students eligible to complete Year 12 in 2014, 4,547 or 17.6 percent of students completed a Languages course to Unit 4 level during their schooling, including through the VSL and CLS (Table 4.5). In total, 38 languages were studied, with the five most-studied languages at VCE level being Chinese (Mandarin), French, Japanese, Vietnamese and Indonesian (Table 4.6).

Contact time

- The average weekly contact time for Languages programs was 144.8 minutes at Year 7, increasing to 234.1 minutes per week at Year 12 (Figure 4.7).
- In 2014, 81.9 percent of Year 7 Languages students and 76.5 percent of Year 8 Languages students were in programs that ran for a minimum of 140 minutes per week. At Years 11 and 12, 92.9 percent and 96.2 percent of Languages students, respectively, studied for a minimum of 200 minutes per week (Figure 4.7).

Regional provision of Languages

- In 2014, Italian was the most-studied language in the SWV and NWV regions, while French was the most-studied language in the NEV region. Enrolments were more evenly distributed in the SEV region, with French, Japanese and Indonesian widely studied in the area (Table 4.7).

Teachers of Languages in Victorian Government Schools

- There were 1,955 qualified Languages teachers teaching in government primary and secondary schools in 2014. Teachers of Asian languages represented 49.3 percent of Languages teachers, European language teachers accounted for 47 percent of teachers, while the remaining 3.7 percent of Languages teachers taught Aboriginal Languages, Arabic, Assyrian, Auslan, Hebrew, Persian and Turkish. Teachers of Italian comprised the largest group of teachers of European languages at 19.8 percent of all teachers, while teachers of Indonesian comprised the largest group of teachers of Asian languages at 19.7 percent of all teachers (Table 5.1).

Bilingual Programs in Victorian Government Schools

- In 2014, one special school and eleven primary schools offered designated bilingual programs where students are taught in or through the language for more than 450 minutes per week (Table 6.1).

The Victorian School of Languages

- In 2014, 49 languages were provided across 40 Victorian School of Languages (VSL) centres, in both metropolitan and regional areas. Appendix 6 provides a list of VSL centres and the languages each centre offered in 2014.
- Of the 49 languages offered, 48 were studied at the primary level, and 48 were studied at the secondary level (Table 7.1). Students were provided with approximately three hours per week of instruction, mainly on Saturday mornings.
- In 2014, 15,681 students from government, Catholic and independent schools, as well as home-schooled students studied Languages through the VSL. Enrolments totalled 7,387 at the primary level and 8,294 at the secondary level. These figures include enrolments through distance education (Table 7.1 and Figure 7.1).
- Overall in 2014, government school students accounted for 67.8 percent of enrolments at the VSL, with students from Catholic and independent schools and home-schooled students accounting for the remaining 32.2 percent of enrolments (Figure 7.2).

VSL distance education

- The VSL offered programs in Arabic, Chinese (Mandarin), Classical Greek, French, German, Greek, Indonesian, Italian, Japanese, Latin and Spanish by distance education in 2014 (Figure 7.2).
- There were 1,605 students from all educational sectors enrolled in Languages study through distance education in 2014 (19.3 percent of all secondary level enrolments at the VSL).

Community Languages Schools

- Community Languages Schools are conducted by incorporated, community-based, not-for-profit organisations accredited for funding by the Department of Education and Training. In 2014, there were 172 accredited Community Languages Schools operating throughout Victoria, providing programs in 40 languages to 37,052 students (Table 8.1).

3. Victorian Government Primary Schools

Schools

In 2014, 883 government primary schools – 73.5 percent of all government primary schools, provided a Languages program. In response to the previous Government’s target for all Prep students to learn a language in 2015, the number of primary schools offering Languages education increased by 71 schools in 2014 (Figure 1.2). Provision of languages programs increased across all year levels, but was greatest at the Prep level, where the number of school programs increased by 16.7 percent compared to 2013 figures (Figure 3.1 and Table 3.1) and although not all primary schools with Languages programs offered the subjects from Prep to Year 6, the number of schools offering Languages education across all years increased slightly from 77.2 percent to 77.9 percent in 2014 (Figure 3.2). The number of students studying Languages also increased, up 11.7 percent from 202,327 enrolments in 2013 to 226,041 enrolments in 2014 (Table 3.3).

Eighteen languages were offered at the primary level in government schools in 2014. Karen, which was offered in 2013, was not offered in 2014, while Assyrian and Swedish were introduced into government primary schools in 2014. There was a significant increase in the number of Chinese (Mandarin) programs (up 35), Indonesian programs (up 22), Japanese programs (up 20) and Spanish programs (up 10 schools), while the number of German programs decreased by five.

Students

In 2014, 68.1 percent or 226,041 students studied a language at the primary level in government schools, representing a significant increase from 2013 (see Figure 3.3). Enrolments increased across all year levels, at an average of 17.2 percent for Prep to Year 2 and an average of 7.8 percent for Years 3 to 6 (Table 3.3).

Languages Taught

Eighteen languages were taught in government primary schools in 2014 (Table 3.4), with primary school students also studying 48 languages through the VSL (out of a total of 49 languages available at the VSL), including via distance education at the Year 6 level. Overall, students at the primary level studied a total of 51 languages in mainstream schools and/or through the VSL in 2014. See Tables 1.1 and 3.4 for full details.

Among the eight most-studied languages, notable increases in enrolments were realised for Chinese (Mandarin) (up 34.4 percent), Indonesian (up 13.7 percent), Auslan (up 12 percent), Japanese (up 9 percent), and French (up 6.7 percent), while enrolments increased 74.9 percent for Spanish, albeit from a smaller enrolment base. Enrolments in Italian and German decreased slightly. These eight most-studied languages accounted for 96.8 percent of enrolments in government primary schools (see Table 3.4). The other languages in government primary schools, in order of highest to lowest enrolments, were Greek, Korean, Aboriginal languages, Turkish, Vietnamese, Arabic, Hindi, Macedonian, Swedish and Assyrian.

Contact Time

The amount of time primary students spent on Languages learning in 2014 ranged from 15 minutes to 300 minutes per week, with an average of 57.1 minutes per week. This data excludes students studying through Bilingual programs. The largest proportion of students, 79.2 percent, were in programs of between 31 and 60 minutes per week, while only 1.2 percent of students were in programs for the recommended minimum of 150 minutes per week (Figure 3.7). Figure 3.8 provides the average contact time per week between 2008 and 2014 and indicates that the average time students spent studying Languages each week at the primary level has remained consistent between 2013 and 2014.

Regional Provision of Languages Programs

In 2014, an additional 71 schools offered a Languages program at the primary level. This increase can be seen across all four regions (Figure 3.9). Ten or more languages were offered in each of the regions, with 15 languages offered in the NWV region. Italian was the most-studied language in the SWV and NWV regions, Chinese (Mandarin) was the most-studied language in the NEV region, while Japanese was the most-studied language in the SEV region (Table 3.6).

4. Victorian Government Secondary Schools

Schools

In 2014, the number of secondary schools offering Languages programs decreased by three to 277 schools. This represents 88.2 percent of the 314 government schools teaching secondary level classes. Of the secondary schools that offered Languages programs, provision was highest at Years 7 and 8, where an average of 94.5 percent of schools provided Language classes. By the Year 11 and 12 levels, only 54.2 percent and 52 percent of schools respectively provided Language classes (Figure 4.1).

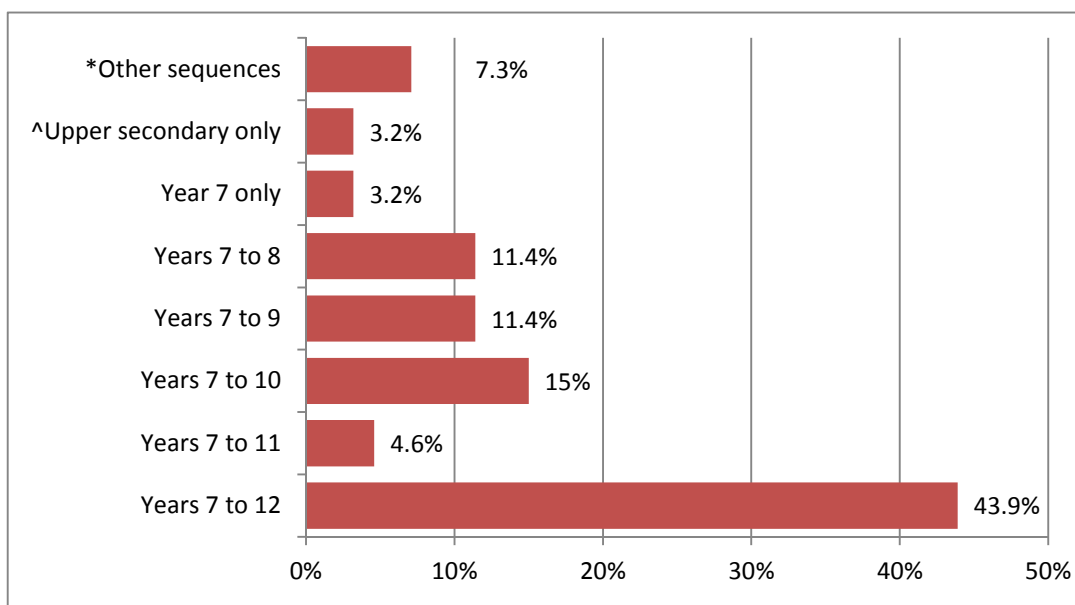

Of the secondary schools that offered Languages programs in 2014, 43.9 percent provided continuous programs from Years 7 to 12, enabling students the opportunity to study a language through to completion at school (Figure 4.2). A further 19.6 percent of schools offered Languages programs from Years 7 to 10 or Years 7 to 11.

Eighteen languages were taught in government secondary schools in 2014. Persian was an additional language in 2014, while Turkish was not offered at the secondary level. While the number of schools offering Languages at the secondary level remained relatively stable, there was some variation in the languages offered with, for example, Spanish programs increasing by three and Persian programs by two. See Table 4.1 for further details.

Students

In 2014, 41.5 percent or 91,134 students studied a language in government secondary schools (Table 4.2 and Figure 4.4). A further 4,115 enrolments represented students who studied more than one language through taster programs, bringing the total number of Languages enrolments to 95,249 (Table 4.3). Overall, the number of students studying a language decreased slightly between 2013 and 2014, with the greatest decline at the Year 12 level, where enrolments decreased 9.7 percent. Enrolments, however, increased 4 percent at the Year 9 level. See Table 4.2 and Figure 4.3 for further detail.

Note that in Figures 4.3, 4.4 and Table 4.2, students are only counted once (91,134 students). All other tables and figures in this section contain information on the number of enrolments in Languages programs (95,249 enrolments). Enrolment figures double count students who are studying more than one language through taster programs. Twenty-five secondary schools offered taster courses in 2014, where, for example, students studied two languages for twenty weeks each per year.

It is also important to note that the Year 12 enrolment figures in this section count students enrolled in Year 12 and studying a language. However, a large number of students complete Languages study to the Unit 4 level before they are actually enrolled in Year 12. These students are not included in Year 12 figures in this section. The section, Languages Study at the VCE Level, explains this discrepancy and provides further details about the study of Languages through to the Year 12 (Unit 4) level amongst graduating students.

Languages Taught

Eighteen languages were taught in secondary schools in 2014 (Table 4.3), with secondary school students also studying 48 languages through the VSL (of a total of 49 languages available at the VSL), including via distance education. Overall, students at secondary schools studied a total of 51 languages through schools and/or the VSL in 2014. See Tables 1.1 and 4.3 for full details.

Study of language patterns differ at the primary and secondary level, with French the most-studied language in secondary schools. However, seven of the eight same languages are represented in the most-studied languages at both levels: French, Italian, Indonesian, Japanese, German, Chinese (Mandarin) and Spanish, with Greek rounding out the eight at the secondary level. These eight languages accounted for 97.8 percent of enrolments at the secondary level. The other languages studied, in order of enrolments, were Auslan, Vietnamese, Latin, Arabic, Macedonian, Classical Greek, Aboriginal Languages, Persian, Hebrew and Korean.

While enrolments decreased slightly between 2013 and 2014, there were fluctuations in enrolments between languages. For example, enrolments increased for Italian, Indonesian, Chinese (Mandarin) and Spanish, but declined for French, Japanese and German (Figure 4.6).

Retention rates

Table 4.4 looks at retention rates between Years 7 and 12. It includes the same cohort of students enrolled in Year 7 in 2009 and in Year 12 in 2014. At the Year 7 level, French, Indonesian, Italian and Japanese were the most-studied languages, but at the Year 12 level, proportional enrolments in Italian and Indonesian had decreased significantly. This trend was countered by a significant increase in proportional enrolments in Chinese (Mandarin), which is largely due to an increase in the number of students in Chinese as a First Language programs at the senior secondary level (Table 4.4). While German and Greek had proportionately lower enrolments at the Year 7 level, retention rates for these languages typically remain strong.

Table 4.4: Secondary enrolments as a percentage of all Languages enrolments, selected languages, Years 7 (2009) and 12, (2014)

Languages Study at the VCE Level

VCE (Years 11 & 12) enrolment figures in Tables 4.2 and 4.3 refer to students who are studying Languages at each year level. However, the flexible nature of the Victorian curriculum results in many students completing a Languages course before they enrol in Year 12. While Table 4.3 (above) indicates that 2,224 students are studying a language in Year 12, it is important to note that over 2,200 Year 12 students had either already completed a Languages course or were continuing Languages study with the VSL or through a CLS.

Although Table 4.2 (above) indicates that 7.6 percent of students enrolled in Year 12 were completing Unit 4 in a Languages course, this figure rises considerably once we consider government secondary school students who completed a Languages course (Unit 4) at an earlier year level or outside of regular school classes through the VSL or through a CLS.

Among students from government schools who were eligible to graduate in 2014, 17.6 percent had completed a Languages course either through their school, through the VSL (including via distance education) or through a CLS. This data was provided by the VCAA. Table 4.6 lists the most-studied languages by students eligible to graduate from VCE in 2014, as well as figures for 2008 to 2013.

Snapshot of students eligible to graduate from VCE in 2013 (students from Victorian government schools) and the languages studied

Table 4.6, following, provides detailed information about the students eligible to graduate in 2014 having completed a Languages course during their senior secondary schooling. As outlined in Table 4.6, this included finishing a Languages course when enrolled in Year 10, Year 11 or Year 12. Overall, a majority of students, 57.4 percent completed Unit 4 of a Languages course when they were enrolled in Year 12. A further 39.8 percent of students completed Unit 4 of a Languages course when they were enrolled in Year 11, while the remaining 2.7 percent completed Unit 4 when they were enrolled in Year 10.

Note that there is a discrepancy between the number of government secondary school students enrolled in Year 12 studying a language, as reported by schools, in Table 4.2 (2,224 students) and the number of government secondary school students enrolled in Year 12 studying a language in Table 4.7 (2,612 students), as reported by the VCAA. This discrepancy is due to the flexible nature of Languages provision in Victoria and also because some students who were eligible to graduate in 2014 may have been enrolled in Year 12 at an earlier stage.

Contact Time

The average contact time for Languages programs varied at each year level and across schools. At the Year 7 level, the average time allocated for Languages programs was 144.8 minutes per week, increasing across the year levels to an average of 234.1 minutes at Year 12. Average contact times at other year levels were Year 8, 149.1 minutes; Year 9, 169.8 minutes; Year 10, 210.7 minutes; and Year 11, 230.4 minutes (Figure 4.7).

The time allocated to Languages study also varied from school to school. In 2014, 81.9 percent of Year 7 Languages students and 76.5 percent of Year 8 Languages students were in programs of a minimum 140 minutes per week. At Years 11 and 12, 92.9 percent and 96.2 percent of students respectively, studied a language for more than 200 minutes per week.

Regional Provision of Languages

Ten or more languages were offered in all four regions at the secondary level in 2014. Italian was the most-studied language in the SWV and NWV regions, while French was the most-studied language in the NEV region. Enrolments were more evenly distributed in the SEV region, with French, Japanese and Indonesian widely studied in the region (Table 4.7).

5. Teachers of Languages in Victorian Government Schools

In 2014, there were 1,955 qualified Languages teachers teaching in Victorian government schools. Among these Languages teachers, over 180 played multiple roles, teaching in more than one school or at both the primary and secondary level. These teachers predominantly taught at two schools, but some teachers taught at up to 12 schools through the blended delivery of programs. Over 450 schools were serviced by these teachers. In instances where teachers taught at more than one school, the majority of these schools were government schools, although many of these teachers also worked at the VSL, Catholic and independent schools, particularly in regional and rural areas.

Teachers of Asian languages represented 49.3 percent of Languages teachers, European language teachers accounted for 47 percent of teachers, while teachers of Aboriginal Languages, Arabic, Assyrian, Auslan, Hebrew, Persian and Turkish made up the remaining 3.7 percent of Languages teachers. There were more teachers of Italian than any of the other languages in 2014 (19.8 percent of all Languages teachers), followed by teachers of Indonesian (19.7 percent of Languages teachers) (Table 5.1).

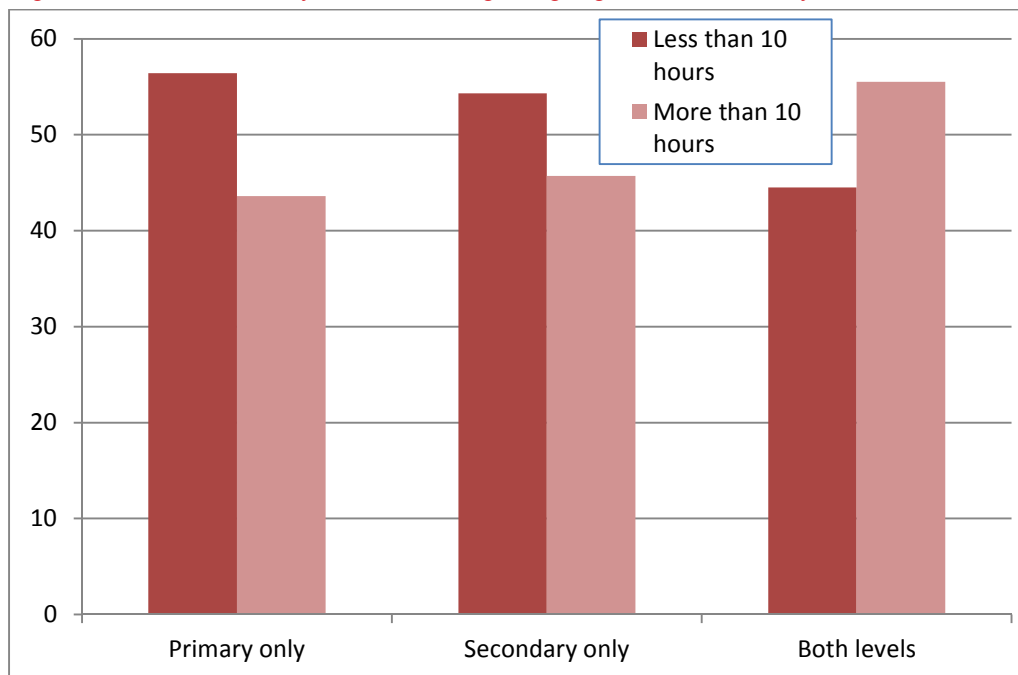

Table 5.1 also provides information on the qualification levels of teachers of Languages in Victorian government schools. This includes qualified Languages teachers with and without a Languages methodology. Overall, 85.9 percent of qualified Languages teachers had a Languages methodology.

Figure 5.2 provides details on the hours teachers spent teaching Languages each week by the level of schooling they taught.

6. Bilingual Programs in Victorian Government Schools

In 2014, one special school and eleven primary schools offered designated bilingual programs (Table 6.1). Bilingual programs provide students with the opportunity to learn curriculum content in, and through, both English and another language. In addition to the language curriculum, content-based teaching takes place in two or more of the domains within the Discipline-based Learning Strand of the AusVELS. Schools may choose from Science, Mathematics, The Arts and The Humanities. Within these domains, bilingual classes are run for subject areas such as visual arts, performing arts, health, sport and physical education, economics, geography, history and the study of society and environment (see Table 6.1). Students are taught in or through the language for a minimum of 450 minutes per week. Additionally, other activities at these schools, such as library time, school assemblies, camps and excursions may also be conducted in the language.

Language teachers in the designated bilingual primary programs are highly qualified and are often supported by teacher aides, assistants or volunteers from the community.

7. The Victorian School of Languages

The Victorian School of Languages is a government school which provides programs in 49 languages through its 40 centres in both metropolitan and regional areas, as well as through distance education in 2014. The VSL provides programs for students from government and non-government schools to develop their home or heritage language; students who may be seeking continuity in Languages study after changing schools or students who wish to learn a new language and who cannot access a particular language in their mainstream school. Lessons are provided outside regular school hours, usually on Saturday mornings, and are typically of three hours' duration.

In total, 15,681 Prep to Year 12 students were enrolled to study a language through the VSL in 2014 (including enrolments via distance education). Of these, 7,387 were primary students and 8,294 were secondary students. Total enrolments at the VSL remained relatively stable between 2010 and 2014.

In 2014, Malayalam was offered for the first time, while no students studied Bengali, which was offered in 2013 (see Table 7.1).

Distance education continued to provide an important avenue for Languages study, with enrolments in distance education representing 19.3 percent of secondary VSL enrolments in 2014. Four students who were enrolled full-time at the Distance Education Centre of Victoria in Year 6 were also given permission to study a language at the VSL through distance education in 2014. All figures referring to the VSL in this section include enrolments through distance education. Further details on distance education are available in the Distance Education Provision at the Victorian School of Languages section. Figure 7.1 provides a comparison of all VSL enrolments from 2008 to 2014 at the primary and secondary levels and shows that enrolments at both the primary and secondary levels remained relatively stable between 2010 and 2014.

Table 7.1 sets out the total VSL enrolments for each language by year level. Forty-seven of the languages taught at the VSL were studied at both the primary and secondary levels, while Syriac was only studied at the primary level and Classical Greek was only studied at the secondary level. The five most popular languages overall were Chinese (Mandarin), Vietnamese, Greek, Japanese and Arabic. Together, these five languages accounted for 43.7 percent of total enrolments in the VSL, with the remaining students spread over a wide range of languages.

Overall, there were noticeable differences in patterns of enrolments between the primary and secondary levels across languages. Some community languages such as Arabic, Greek, Persian and Sinhala, for example, had stronger enrolments at the primary level than at the secondary level, although most community languages had fairly even enrolments across both levels. By contrast, other languages such as Japanese, French, Indonesian, and German had a higher proportion of enrolments at the secondary levels.

Figure 7.2 represents the proportions of primary and secondary students enrolled at the VSL who attend government and non-government schools. Overall, the majority of students at the VSL were government school students, representing 67.8 percent of enrolments overall, with non-government school students (from Catholic and independent schools, as well as home-schooled students) making up the remaining 32.2 percent of enrolments.

Distance Education Provision at the Victorian School of Languages

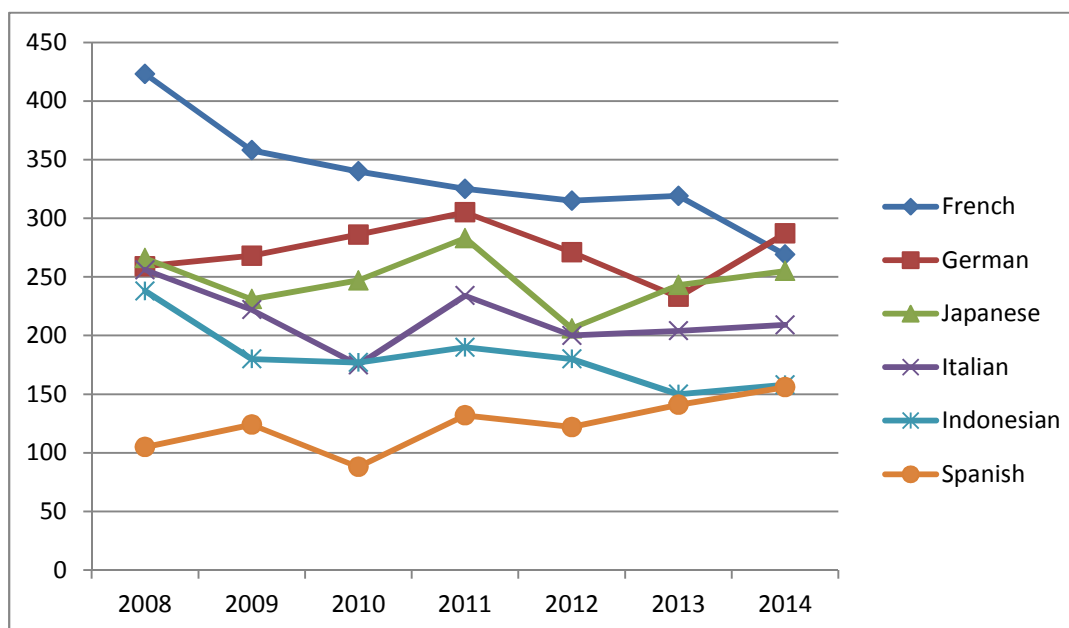

In 2014, the VSL provided Arabic, Chinese (Mandarin), Classical Greek, French, German, Greek, Indonesian, Italian, Japanese, Latin and Spanish by distance education to primary (Year 6) students who were enrolled full-time in distance education, to secondary students wishing to study a language which was not offered at their mainstream school, and to secondary students who were not currently attending a school. Of all secondary students enrolled at the VSL in 2014, 1,605 students, or 19.3 percent, were studying a language through distance education (Table 7.2). Figure 7.3 provides changes in enrolments in the six languages most-studied through distance education between 2008 and 2014.

8. Community Languages Schools

Community Languages Schools (CLS) programs are administered by incorporated community-based, not-for-profit organisations, which are accredited for funding by DET.

Community Languages Schools provide Languages education programs that are complementary to those provided by mainstream schools and the Victorian School of Languages (VSL). Community Languages Schools provide classes to students from Prep to Year 12 (depending on the language) outside mainstream school hours; i.e. after school or on weekends.

In 2014, there were 172 accredited Community Languages Schools in Victoria, offering programs in 40 languages to 37,052 students, 34,830 of whom were eligible for funding under the DET CLS program. Table 8.1 provides enrolments in CLS at the primary and secondary level by language, as well as listing the number of CLS offering each language.

Table 8.2 provides the number of CLS teachers teaching each language. These teachers have a range of qualifications including primary and/or secondary teacher qualifications gained in Australia or from overseas, qualifications in language teaching methodology or no teacher qualifications. DET continues to provide support and training opportunities for teachers employed in CLS.
